FRANKFORT BOY HURT BY MIXER; DAD FILES SUIT

For alleged injuries suffered last July 3 by seven year old Robert Emperor of Frankfort when his foot became entangled in a concrete mixer, $5,000 is being sought from Charles Pfaff in a personal injury suit instituted in circuit court in Joliet.

Filing the suit in behalf of young Emperor, a minor, was his father, Wilbur Emperor. They are represented by Attorney Melville Muckelstone.

According to the complaint, Pfaff was the operator of a motor-driven concrete mixer which was being used in construction work at Frankfort. The mixer was parked on the southeast corner of Hickory and Kansas streets, in Frankfort. The equipment was left uncovered and easily accessible, despite the fact that it was "attractive to children of tender years", the complaint recites. The mixer "incited childish curiosity", it is charged.

On July 3, at about 2:30 p.m., young Emperor, according to the complaint, yielded to childish instincts and climbed on the framework of the mixer, then pulled the dump lever. The dump lever controlled the dumping of cement into the revolving mixer bowl.

After pulling the lever, the youth either slipped or fell and his left foot was enmeshed in the gears of the motor, it is alleged. He suffered permanent injuries, the complaint charges. For these the $5,000 judgment is being sought.

GENERAL MANAGER OF PMA WARNS AGAINST FARM SUBSIDIES AT ANNUAL MEETING

Continuation of consumer subsidies in place of fair market prices for agricultural products will force farm organizations to make annual demands upon Congress for the highest subsidies possible, Arthur H. Lauterbach, general manager of Pure Milk Association, predicted in his annual report to delegates and members at their 21st annual meeting in Chicago March 12.

"Farmers generally have been opposed to subsidies since they were first proposed," he declared. "Farmers welcomed Secretary Anderson's statement that dairy subsidies would be eliminated by March 30 of this year. They accepted the Secretary's statement that consumer prices would have to go up some and that producer prices would go down some."

"However, organized labor's demands and strikes for the same 'take-home' pay as during wartime leave farmers no alternative but to seek the same 'take-home' pay for their products."

Lauterbach added that the prospect of subsidies being continued until after the elections next fall is good strategy for the administration in power but that it heightens the danger of "enslaving agriculture to perpetual subsidies." He said "It behooves agricultural people to do everything in their power to prevent Congress from appropriating anymore money for dairy subsidies."

Reporting to Association members on PMA proposals for Order 41 amendments at the federal hearing last month Lauterbach emphasized the need for higher Class 1 (fluid) and Class II (cream) premiums over condensers for milk produced in the fall months when feed and other production costs are materially higher. "It is my opinion," he said, "that prices of all dairy products on an average must be raised at least 40c per hundred pounds to achieve the milk production goal set by the government for 1946. This will, of course, mean an increase in consumer prices of about one cent per quart."

Lauterbach urged that all ceilings on dairy products be removed during the heavy milk production period of May and June to permit prices to seek supply and demand levels. "To those who say butter prices will go too high, I must reply that they will not be as high as prices now being paid in 'black market' channels. If ceilings are removed from all dairy products, butter will find its rightful place with the other products made from milk. Butter was one of the products drafted for war and it is time for it to be released. Fluid milk producers should not lose sight of the fact that butter is normally the balance wheel of the dairy industry and in the next period of excess milk supplies, butter will be the product that will fix the fluid milk price."

"Right now the dairy industry finds itself in an almost impossible situation because there are price ceilings on butter and not on wholesale fluid cream. Cream is being bought at high prices, churned into butter by custom churners and sold through channels, not subject to the OPA regulations under which legitimate dealers must operate."

THE EVERYDAY LIFE OF A PEOPLE

LESSON TEXT: Ruth 1:8-17.
MEMORY SELECTION: Intreat me not to leave thee, or to return from following after thee; for whither thou goest, I will go; and where thou lodgest, I will lodge; thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God.—Ruth 1:16.

A good life in the midst of a corrupt and confused age—such is the life of Ruth in the awful chaos of the time of the judges. One is reminded of the poet's words:

"How far that little candle throws its beams!
So shines a good deed in a naughty world."

It is refreshing to have a glimpse into the home life of God-fearing people who live right in spite of the low standards around them.

Ruth knew life's sorrows and its bitter disappointments. She was a widow, destitute of all she held most dear. Yet she, because of the sweet purity of her life and her devotion to God and those she loved, became an example for others.

As we read our lesson we first hear how logic speaks, then love replies, and finally a life says the final word.

I. Logic (vv. 8-13).

Tragic misfortune had visited Naomi, who with her husband and two sons had gone from Bethlehem to Moab in a time of famine. Not only had her husband died but also her two sons, who had married Gentile women, leaving three widows in one family to mourn together. Naomi craved the fellowship of her own people in her hour of trial, and she arose to return to her own land.

Her departure brought out in the two daughters-in-law the expression of kindness and loyalty which should exist in every family, but which is all too often lacking. Her own testimony concerning these girls of Moab is that they dealt kindly with her and with the dead. That word speaks volumes. There is so little genuine kindness in the world.

Both Orpah and Ruth went with her on the way, protesting their loyal purpose to go with her all the way.

Naomi met their kind offer with the only sensible answer. There was no point in leaving their homes and loved ones and going with her to another country.

Logic is so conclusive and so final. Yes, and sometimes it reaches the wrong conclusion. Love has something to say about the matter. Let us listen to its voice.

II. Love (v. 14).

Orpah loved her mother-in-law. That is evident. She wept at the thought of parting, and was affectionate in her final farewell. We must not be too quick to censure her. She did what Naomi told her to do. She responded to her love for home and kinfolk. She gave up reluctantly, but she did give up and turn back.

How glad we are that Ruth showed a deeper love. "Orpah kissed her mother-in-law, but Ruth clave unto her." There is a difference. Such love cannot be denied. It is the most precious possession that a man can have, apart from his fellowship with God. The love of a devoted father or mother, of a noble helpmate, or of a little boy or girl, these are the things that really make life worth while.

Life has put into the hands of many of us the opportunity of showing just that kind of love in these postwar days. A boy comes home crippled and disabled and a loyal sweetheart shows her undiminished love for him, even though he can never again be what he had expected to be. That is love. A mother and a father take to their hearts a promising young son who returns from overseas with a shattered nervous system, and give their lives anew to him. One could go on and on with such illustrations, but what we are saying is that it takes more than a kiss and some tears to express real love. "Ruth clave unto her." Such love expresses itself in a

III. Life (vv. 15-17).

Literature knows no more beautiful declaration of faith and devotion than these words, and nothing could improve on it. Lord Tennyson said of the book of Ruth that "no art can improve on it." And of these verses another said, "We cannot hope to contribute to literature a sentence so exquisite and thrilling as that into which Ruth poured the full measure of a noble heart, but we can imitate her devotion" (William Jennings Bryan).

The conclusion of the story finds Ruth married to Boaz, her kinsman-redeemer, and "living happily ever after," as a true romance should end. God gives happy endings.

Here we find the right attitude toward marriage, something which needs emphasis in our day. Above all, as we remember that Ruth was an ancestress of Jesus, we see anew the importance of clean, noble, godly living. What will the generations to come be able to say about our lives?

WASHINGTON. — Some people are wondering whether the fact-finding board for the meat packing industry took the trouble to read the newspapers. If so, they might not have recommended that the housewife bear the main burden of the cost of increased wages in the meat packing industry.

The fact-finding board, which included Dr. Edwin E. Witte of Wisconsin university, Chief Justice Raymond W. Starr of the Michigan Supreme court, and Clark Kerr, former chairman of the meat packing branch of the war labor board—three able men—decided that a 16-cent pay increase was fair and equitable for meat packing workers. But they added that only five cents of this was "absorbable by the meat industry without price or subsidy relief."

In other words, the fact finders recommended that the big meat packers could pay only 5 cents of the 16-cent wage increase out of their own pockets. The rest would have to be passed on to the consumer or the government. Their report was filed February 7.

However, early in December, long before the fact-finding board was appointed, a number of smaller meat packing plants had already signed contracts with the CIO and AFL for 15 cents an hour pay increase without any strings attached regarding increased meat prices.

The small packers who signed such agreements included Hygrade Food Products of New York, George A. Hormel of Austin, Minn., and others in the Chicago area.

Apparently, the fact finders did not take this into consideration. Apparently also, they ignored the fact that Swift and company previously had agreed to a pay boost of 10 cents an hour without any strings attached regarding increased meat prices to the housewife.

For, despite Swift's offer of 10 cents an hour and the smaller companies' increase of 15 cents, the fact finders recommended that only 5 cents of the 16-cent increase could be paid for by meat packers. The remaining 11 cents will be passed on to the housewife—unless the government votes a subsidy.

BREAD WASTE SCANDAL.

Department of agriculture sleuths have been doing some quiet checking of unscrupulous bakeries which violate bread sales regulations in order to kill off competition.

Despite the fact that the nation has been forced on a "dark bread" diet to help feed war-starved peoples of the world, thousands of loaves of good bread are still going to waste, or being fed to hogs and chickens.

It works like this:

If a big bakery is trying to grab business away from a competing bakery, it will begin supplying grocery stores on a "consignment basis," which means that grocers' shelves are loaded up with supplies of bread in excess of what they can sell.

The following day—sometimes the same day—drivers pick up the unsold loaves and replace them with fresh stock, charging the grocer only for the bread actually sold. Idea is to promote sales of a particular brand of bread because of its "freshness."

This is a violation of war food order No. 1, but it hasn't stopped certain bakeries in Houston, Texas, Richmond, Va., San Francisco, Cleveland, Kansas City and St. Louis from carrying on the practice on a huge scale.

Instead of making their returned stocks of one-day-old bread available at a reduced price to poor families, the loaves frequently wind up in garbage bins. One Texas farmer who tipped off the department of agriculture about conditions in Houston said he had been buying wagon-loads of bread "fresh enough to eat" to feed his hogs and chickens.

ATOM VS. BATTLESHIP

Unless President Truman does something drastic about it very soon, the forthcoming atomic tests in the Pacific, scientists say, may turn out to be a study in water-spouts instead of atomic energy.

On-the-surface atomic-bomb explosions, the scientists claim, will add nothing to the knowledge already accumulated from previous explosions at New Mexico, Hiroshima and Nagasaki, except that we may learn the size and damage of the world's largest water spout.

Administration lobbying to confirm Ed Pauley has reached white-hot pitch. Gov. Mon Wallgren of Washington was brought east to put the heat on Senators Magnuson and Hugh Mitchell, the latter having been Wallgren's secretary. Both will now vote for Pauley. . . . In some states, where the November race will be close, a vote for Pauley may mean defeat for a Democrat.

The Pauley-Allen-Vardaman Merry-Go-Rounds have evolved the latest Washington wisecrack: "Truman is suffering from Pendergast ulcers!"

When Your Back Hurts -

And Your Strength and Energy Is Below Par

It may be caused by disorder of kidney function that permits poisonous waste to accumulate. For truly many people feel tired, weak and miserable when the kidneys fail to remove excess acids and other waste matter from the blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, rheumatic pains, headaches, dizziness, getting up night, leg pains, swelling. Sometimes frequent and scanty urination with smarting and burning is another sign that something is wrong with the kidneys or bladder.

There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. It is better to rely on a medicine that has won countrywide approval than on something less favorably known. Doan's have been used and tested many years. Are at all drug stores. Get Doan's today.

W.N.U. RELEASE

THE STORY THUS FAR: The newcomer tells Jane he is a bookkeeper and she has him start on the ranch books that evening after the work is done. "What's your name?" she asked. He hesitated, then said: "John Hazlett." He flushed and stammered, and she told him that he had not given his right name. He admitted it. "I ask you to make good," she told him. A bullet through the window wounded Hazlett. Dousing the lights, he rushed from the room to grapple with the assailant. It was Jordan. Wounded and dazed, Hazlett was unable to prevent Jordan's escape, setting fire to the corral and sheds before departing. Hazlett saves Jim's life during the stampede of cattle.

CHAPTER III

For the second time her soft, cool fingers touched his, her clear blue eyes looked into his, and he wavered. He reddened to his hair and felt his purpose growing soft at her touch!

"You don't like to be thanked and you won't tell me your name. Can't you—trust me?"

"If I told you I couldn't stay here, and I want to stay!" His voice shook. In the shadowed hall she could see that he paled to the lips, but his eyes held hers.

"You will stay?" she exclaimed, and her hands trembled slightly as she pressed them against the wall behind her. "Don't you realize that you saved my brother? We're in your debt."

"There's no debt about it—it was my good luck; you owe me nothing," he replied gravely. "If I should tell you why I came across those mountains you might send me away."

She was silent for a moment, and her eyes looked at him steadily, gravely. She seemed to challenge him.

"I haven't told my brother," she said simply. "He's going to do all he can for you; he's in bed now—I made him go, he was worn out—but you'll see him later. I told him nothing."

Hazlett was shaken; he stood staring at the first rays of sunshine on the threshold of the open door.

"Which makes me your debtor," he said at last, hoarsely. Then he turned and saw her fine face and her clear eyes and choked back the words that came, ending abruptly: "Why didn't you tell him?"

"I didn't tell—" she hesitated, and added quickly—"because I want you to stay!"

"You—you want me to stay?" he exclaimed, his face aflame.

He got no answer. Quick as a flash Jane opened the door behind her, slipped in and shut it in his face.

Suddenly, a door opened far down the corridor and he heard Stenhart's voice. It rang strong and hearty; the invalid was getting well! It was like an electric shock to Hazlett. He straightened himself, turned sharply and went out of the house.

The sun had risen, the wide acres of the ranch were bathed in beauty, doves were cooing in the trees, Jane's roses filled the air with fragrance. He turned and was going toward the creek. He had forgotten that he was hungry until he heard old Mac shouting at him.

"Grab's waitin'!"

The old man was beckoning from the low adobe in the rear. Hazlett followed him into the bunkhouse. The vacqueros had bolted their food and returned to the work of hunting up the strays. There was no one about but MacDowell, Ah Ling and old Teresa, the housekeeper. The little brown woman chose to wait on the stranger herself.

"You saved the senior," she said, gazing at the young man with intent dark eyes.

He laughed. "By accident. I'm not much of a cowpuncher, Teresa!" "Madre de Dios, but you are a brave man, senior!" she replied filling his cup with Ah Ling's strong coffee.

"Teresa likes you a heap better'n she likes Stenhart," laughed old Mac, lighting his pipe.

Hazlett looked around at the little old woman. "So you don't like Stenhart?"

She shook her head violently, crossing herself. "He has got a devil, senior!"

The young man laughed loudly, thrusting his plate aside. "Come," he said, "tell me—what sort of a devil?"

Teresa only shook her head more violently than ever.

Old Mac, taking his pipe out of his mouth, laughed outright. "What you goin' to do, Teresa, when he marries Jane?"

"God forbid!" said Teresa, rolling her eyes.

"I heard it was comin' off soon as he got well," teased Mac.

The old woman gave him a ferocious look, scowling like a witch. "Ca! Then I will tell her," she said bitterly. "I will tell her what kind of dreams he is having!"

MacDowell chuckled. "Dreams? Nightmare, I reckon—hello, there he is now; they've got him out under the trees, Jane an' th' nurse. First time, too!"

As he spoke he pointed out of the window, and Hazlett saw the three figures under a group of live oaks. Fanny Sewell was seating the convalescent in a large wicker armchair while Jane stood talking to them.

Teresa, crossing herself and mumbling, retreated suddenly on Ah Ling, and upset a dish of fried potatoes. The Chinaman began to scold loudly and old Mac laughed at them. It gave Hazlett his chance; he rose and went out quickly, standing still in the shadow of the house and watching the group under the trees. The morning light was wonderful, he could see every object clearly. Stenhart looked thin and pale. Fanny Sewell, needing something she had left indoors, turned and went back to the house. Jane was alone with Stenhart. The man watching them turned white; he had no difficulty in seeing that Stenhart was taking advantage of his opportunity. He was leaning forward now to plead with the girl. And Jane? The watcher could see that she blushed. For one tense moment he meant to intervene, it was more than he could

"I came a long way, Stenhart. Look well at me—I came to kill you!"

He bear; then she laughed at the man, turning away.

"You're a lot better, Max!" she teased, and her fresh young voice came clearly to Hazlett's ears.

Stenhart answered inaudibly, stretching out his hand, trying to detain her. Jane laughed at him again. Meanwhile, the trained nurse, coming to the door of the house, called Teresa.

Hazlett heard the slap of moccasins on the stone floor behind him. He stepped back and caught old Teresa by the arm before she came in sight of the others.

"Don't go yet," he said, in a low voice. "If you go with the nurse—Miss Keller will be left alone with Stenhart!"

The little old woman stared up at the big stranger.

"Madre de Dios!" she said below her breath. "You hate him, too, eh?"

Hazlett nodded grimly. "He and I are old acquaintances, Teresa. Come, tell me what he dreams about?"

The old woman shrank. "I promise the nurse; I can not tell, senior!"

He frowned. What was it that the fair haired nurse and the little brown woman were hiding from Jane? Had Stenhart told things in his sleep? He pressed his hand hard on the woman's wrist.

"Tell me! See, if I knew I might keep him from marrying her!"

Teresa looked up at him with shrewd dark eyes. "I do not know you, senior!"

"But you like me better than Stenhart?"

"Tck! I like a bad tooth better, senior!"

"But you won't betray him? You—"

"Teresa! Oh, Teresa!" called Jane's young voice close at hand. She was going up to the house to answer Fanny's summons.

Teresa broke away and ran after her, and together, the three women went into the house.

Stenhart sat alone under the trees, a paper open in his hand.

Hazlett stood a moment longer, listening to Ah Ling's chatter with old Mac. He could smell the strong tobacco in the old man's pipe. Stenhart's dark head was bent over his newspaper. His profile was handsome, clean-cut as cameo; his hands looked thin and white. Far off by the corrals some men were building a new gate, and the distant sound of their hammers came on the wind. The stranger left the shelter of the low adobe and walked swiftly over to the trees. On the turf his footsteps made no sound. The paper rustled in the invalid's long fingers, and he stirred uneasily, as if he felt a presence, and looked up. The paper dropped to the ground and he covered in his chair.

"My God, Sherwin, you! How did you come here?"

The young man, standing in the sunlight, looked back at him, quite unmoved.

"So you know me? I came a long way, Stenhart. Look well at me—I came to kill you!"

In the terrible silence the hammers seemed to grow clamorous. Stenhart tried to rise.

"I'll call for help—I'm still a sick man, John Sherwin!" he babbled wildly.

Sherwin thrust him back in his chair. "You coward!" he said bitterly. "You'll have your chance; I don't deal blows in secret—as you do!"

Stenhart groaned. "You're crazy—I always said you were! How did you get here?"

"That's no affair of yours! I came to kill you."

Stenhart gripped the arms of his chair with shaking hands; he was not a well man but he tried to summon his old courage. "I'll raise the alarm—why, I can settle you in five minutes, Sherwin!"

Sherwin's eyes glinted like steel. "Can you? Try it!"

Stenhart tried again to rise, then something in the other man's look held him, he shrank. "My God, what do you mean to do? You—you can't kill me out here—in cold blood!"

"I can," replied his tormentor, "but I mean to let you think about it, imagine it, wonder how I mean to do it. It would be too pleasant if I finished you now!"

Hope kindled in the other's eyes; he knew a way to end this braggart. "I'm obliged to you for a respite," he said mockingly; "thank you!"

But it was Sherwin who laughed, and the sound of his mirth sent a horrible chill through Stenhart.

"I know your plan, Friend Max," he said coolly, "but it can't save you. I shall kill you just the same—only a little more quickly."

Stenhart's courage began to rise, his face reddened. "You'll not stay here; I'll make Las Palomas too hot for you! You'll see. I can make any place too hot for you."

Sherwin looked at him steadily for an instant, then he spoke as steadily.

"It wouldn't save you, Stenhart—nothing will save you—but the sooner you drop that stuff the longer you'll live. Get me?"

Stenhart writhed in his chair. "You can't do it! You don't mean to do it! You're threatening me to—to hush me up!"

Sherwin bent down and, grasping the arms of his chair, he looked deep into his eyes. "You know what I've endured, you know what you did—do you think that I wouldn't kill you?"

Stenhart, staring back into those steel gray eyes, wavered and blanched. He was still weak from illness; his limbs shook.

"You—you fiend!" he gasped.

"You call me a fiend—what do you call yourself, you liar?" Sherwin's voice was low but it was terrible. He let go the arms of the chair and straightened himself. "You're half sick still. I'll let you get your strength first, but—I shall kill you presently."

Stenhart said nothing; he was shaking now from head to foot. Something deeper than his fear of Sherwin shook him. He set his teeth, but they chattered.

Sherwin, watching him, laughed. Then he looked toward the house and saw Fanny Sewell emerge, carrying a tray.

"Your nurse is coming," he said to the invalid. "Get your strength quickly; I don't care to kill a sick man, Stenhart."

Stenhart leaned back in his chair and shut his eyes. He was feigning more weakness than he felt; he was trying to plan some way to rid himself of this peril, for he knew that Sherwin meant every word he said. He would kill him! Though his eyes were closed, he listened keenly and he heard Sherwin's footsteps retreating across the grass; then came the rustle of a woman's skirt and he looked up and saw Fanny Sewell coming with her little tray. The sun was shining on her fair hair and her serene face, and he tried to think he had just awakened from a nightmare.

Sherwin, passing the young nurse, went to the house. The door stood open and he entered, going at once to Jim's desk. He had promised Jane to straighten the accounts; mechanically he sat down to his task, but his mind was full of the scene under the trees, of Stenhart's aghast face. He drew a deep breath and his clenched fist struck the desk sharply, rattling its shabby litter out of the pigeonholes. He had no pity for Stenhart's apparent weakness; he had evidently been near death and he was glad that he had not died. If he had died he would have escaped.

There was a little rustle of paper; a breeze from the window had got among the papers that his violence had shaken out of the pigeonholes. It lifted a thin tissue covering a flat cardboard and rustled it. As Sherwin looked down it blew the thin paper completely away and he saw what it had covered. A photograph, the photograph of a very young girl, her hair in braids on her slim shoulders, her chin lifted, her eyes looking up at him, a smile on her young lips—Jane! Unconsciously a great change came over him; the blood rushed to his face, his eyes softened.

Veterans' SERVICE BUREAU

EDITOR'S NOTE: This newspaper, through special arrangement with the Washington Bureau of Western Newspaper Union at 1616 Eye Street, N. W., Washington, D. C., is able to bring readers this weekly column on problems of the veteran and serviceman and his family. Questions may be addressed to the above Bureau and they will be answered in a subsequent column. No replies can be made direct by mail, but only in the column which will appear in this newspaper regularly.

Factors That Determine Veteran's Pension Rate

Where veterans of World War II have a disability incurred in or aggravated by service in the armed forces, there is no set disability pension he may receive, the amount being determined by the degree of disability upon examination by the Veterans' administration.

The rates of pension range from $11.50 per month for a disability of a degree of 10 per cent to $115 a month for total disability and where certain specific disabilities occur, such as a loss of hands or legs, or blindness, or combinations of disabilities, the amount payable may be as high as $265 per month. These rates are determined, as near as possible upon the average impairment of earning capacity.

It must be remembered, and particularly in cases of World War I veterans, where application is made for disability pension, not service-connected, that these pensions are not payable if the disability is the result of the veteran's own willful misconduct or vicious habits. Also where total disability is not service-connected, pension is not payable to the veteran where the annual income is $1,000 if unmarried, or if it exceeds $2,500 if he is married.

Many times, the experience shows, according to the Veterans' administration, World War I veterans applying for pensions years after World War I for non-service-connected disability are turned down because the Veterans' administration decides the disability is due to the "willful misconduct or vicious habits" of the veterans.

Questions and Answers

Q. My son has been in the army for 22 months and spent 16 months in England, France, Belgium and is now in Germany. He is with the 2242 quartermaster truck company. Does the war department have any word when this company will be shipped home?—Mrs. H. N., Plankington, N. D.

A. As of February 15 this outfit was in Aushbach, Germany, and the war department has no word on when it will be returned to this country.

Q. My son, who is in Japan, made out his insurance papers to me before he went overseas. I have been married since that time. Do I have to have my name changed on the policy?—Mrs. J. W., Fort Bragg, Calif.

A. The Veterans' administration says it would not make much difference, but would probably save some time in the event the insurance became payable. The veteran must make application to his commanding officer to change the name of the beneficiary.

Q. Is a widow of a World War I veteran who is elderly and in poor health, eligible for a pension if she has an income of $100 a month?—Mrs. W. Mc., Arlington, Mass.

A. If death was service-connected, yes, she is entitled to a pension. If not service-connected, she is not entitled if her income is $1,000 or more annually, if she has no children. I would ask your nearest Veterans' administration office, however, because the law says that certain items are not considered income and determination as to whether the claimant's income exceeds the respective amount is made by the Veterans' administration.

Q. My son was given an honorable discharge in May 1945. I wish to know if he should draw a pension as he was wounded in Belgium. He was with Patton's 3rd army. He is a member of the American Legion at Fayette, Ala., Post No. 127, but as yet has not even been examined for a pension. No one knows about the nervous disposition he has except his parents. —Mrs. E. M., Fayette, Ala.

A. From your letter, I would say your son most certainly is entitled to a disability rating, but he must apply to the Veterans' administration for an examination for determination of the amount. Apply immediately to your nearest office of the Veterans' administration for this examination.

Q. My boy died in the army in France. I want to know how I can get the large flag they put over the casket to bury them. I know of some mothers who have received them. I would thank you if you can tell me. —Broken-hearted mother, Brownsville, Tenn.

A. Relatives or next of kin of deceased veterans, who died in service, may receive a United States flag by application to the postmaster at any county seat post office. Application may be made on Veterans' administration form 2008 available at local office.

than people in large cities. This makes the small town market vital to the economic welfare of the nation, said Arch Thiele, Director of Merchandising, Pathfinder Magazine, in a recent address before the National Retail Dry Goods convention in New York. Mr. Thiele's talk, "Know Your Own Strength", cited the great small-town retail market which has been neglected by the textile trade. An engineering approach should be taken in distribution and time and motion studies would be of great benefit, Mr. Thiele said. He lent weight to his discussion by presenting a motion picture study of life in a small town and urged the textile men to take a leaf from the drug and hardware fields, in which an outstanding job has been done in the small town market.

Your RED CROSS Must Carry On!

FOR many of yesterday's soldiers the war will never end. In thousands of hospital beds, in sick minds and bodies all over the nation, the battle scars remain long after the battle is over. For these veterans, the Red Cross continues as a familiar, helpful friend.

Thousands of Red Cross workers both in this country and abroad are helping to lift the burden from the worried, crippled and discouraged GI's. You find Red Cross workers in the home service bureaus, arranging loans, filing claims, smoothing family problems; you hear of other workers still overseas, easing the lives of our soldiers in occupied countries.

In addition to caring for the needs of soldiers and veterans and their families, the Red Cross is continuing its important educational services—nutrition, accident prevention, first aid, water safety, and home nursing courses.

In times of disaster, the Red Cross straightens tangled lives, provides food, housing and financial aid at the earliest possible moment. YOUR contribution to this year's Red Cross Fund Campaign is necessary for the continuation of these vital services. Your Red Cross Must Carry On!

Parents Urged To Form Home Study Classes

Parents are urged to sit down with their children tonight and institute a "special" home work class in safety on the streets for the coming Spring, according to a safety bulletin issued by the Greater Chicago Safety Council.

"In every home in the city during the next few weeks closets will be flung open and from dark recesses will come roller skates, kites, baseballs and bats marbles, all the Spring playtime paraphernalia for children," Joseph P. Stech, Manager of the Council, states in the bulletin.

"Parents must supplement the schools' safety education of their children by stressing the playtime hazards attendant on such practices as running into the streets to retrieve lost balls, and roller skating on the smooth asphalt of supposedly trafficless side streets," he warned.

In 1945, 27 Chicago children were killed and 1,341 injured while playing in the streets. These accidents were caused when a motor vehicle operator could not stop his car quickly enough as a child darted into his path.

"Daily impressing on the minds of children the ways of safe play will save many future heartaches for parents," the bulletin concluded.

NEW APO ADDRESSES FOR MERCHANT SEAMEN

New forwarding procedure designed to facilitate delivery of mail to the crews of American Merchant ships throughout the world and for the first time utilizing the Army postal system has been announced by the War Shipping Administration.

Under the new system it will be necessary for a seaman to inform his family or other correspondents, as to where his mail is to be addressed. If his vessel is operating in the Pacific, west of Honolulu, and touching any ports on a given APO list, mail should then be addressed:

(Return Address)
John Q. Doe
(Name of Vessel)
APO No.
Care of Postmaster
San Francisco, Cal.

APO numbers of Pacific ports are: Chinampo, Korea, 815; Espiritu Santo, New Hebrides, 708; Kobe, Japan, 660; Naha, Okinawa, 438; Osaka, Japan, 660; Saipan, Marianas, 244; Suribachi, Iwo Jima, 86; Yokohama, Japan (also Tokyo Bay) 503. When making use of these APO numbers the correspondent should attach sufficient postage at the rate of six cents per half ounce for transmission by air mail.

Mail for vessels operating in other than western Pacific areas, or to ports to which International Mail Service has been established, should be thus addressed:

(Return Address)
John Q. Doe
SS (Name of Ship)
Name and address of foreign agent, if known, or Care of Poste Restante
Name of port.

At the time seamen sign on for voyages general agents operating vessels for the War Shipping Administration will provide each crew member with forms showing the foreign ports on the vessel's itinerary, if known, foreign agent's addresses, when known, or the APO numbers and the estimated date of arrival at the ports. Upon receiving such information from crew member, correspondent should plan to dispatch mail to the ports indicated sufficiently in advance of the arrival dates to permit letters to arrive in time for delivery. Ordinary mail rate is permissible if the correspondent knows there is sufficient time for forwarding mail to these points by surface vessel. Correspondent should make certain enough postage is affixed, rates being obtainable at all post offices.

Registered letter mail and packages must still go overseas under regulation of the U. S. Post Office Department. There is still no mail service to seamen at German ports.

Mokena Boy Did Much Fighting In Large Pacific Area

By the time Gordon Benson arrived home in Mokena, he had visited many Pacific Islands and finally landed in Japan. By following his movements, we find he was inducted into the service July 26, 1943 and trained eight months in this country in the combat engineer group. On March 3, 1944 he sailed on the Sea Corporal from Camp Stoneman, Cal. and landed at Guadalcanal April 20, 1944. There they built a replacement depot and while that was under construction, they lived in tents for two months.

Their next move was by boat to Bougainville where they were transferred from the engineers to the infantry. At Bougainville they saw their first combat when 30,000 Yanks met 80,000 Japs and cleaned them up, this is an area of 15 miles by 7 miles, a beach head and which they maintained, with the Australians coming in and mopping up. They were on Bougainville for six months.

Their next move was to Leyte, for two months, and we all know the hard fighting that went on there. Gordon was in it and half of their company was lost. It was two months of constant fighting and when that invasion was completed, the Filipinos came in and relieved them, so they could go on another invasion, this time to Cebu City on the island of Cebu, one of the Philippine groups. Here the fighting lasted for four months, cleaning out the Japs.

With Gordon it seemed, that it was one invasion after another. After Cebu City they moved to Dumaguette and that campaign lasted for two more months when they again returned to Cebu City.

They were out on a rifle range when the word came thru that the Japs had surrendered, and a celebration started, which lasted for several days. After that they were transferred from the 6th Army to the 8th, the latter being the army of occupation. That made their next move Yokohama, and there they saw the devastation wrought by the Atomic bomb. All industry was flat. From Yokohama they moved to Tachikawa and here it was that Gordon was taken ill with Yellow Jaundice and was a patient in a hospital for the next three months. This hospital was named St. Luke's and while there the Christmas season was enjoyed. Gordon attended the Protestant service which was as much homelike as possible, with a Christmas tree very much in evidence.

Dec. 27, 1945 he was discharged from the hospital and on Jan. 18, 1946, with 5,000 other boys, sailed on the U. S. S. General Gordon, from Yokohama and landed at San Francisco, Jan. 29. The next day they entrained for Camp Grant and arriving there he at once telephoned his brother Edwin at Rockford who was more than surprised to hear from him as Gordon had not sent word he was coming home. Edwin went at once to Camp Grant and brought Gordon to his home where there was a glad reunion with his other brother and sister from where he telephoned his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Anton Benson in Mokena.

On February 7, 1946 he received his honorable discharge and then home to Mokena where a complete family reunion took place. Gordon received the rank of Private First Class. He brought home many souvenirs, among which are: Jap silk kimono, Jap watches, sabre, field glasses and flags. He wore the Southwest Pacific and the Asiatic Pacific ribbons, the latter having two bronze stars and Arrowhead; Good Conduct, World War two, Victory and Philippine liberation ribbons, the latter with two bronze stars. Other decorations are the Infantry Combat Badge and many overseas stripes. Gordon is planning to attend the University of Wisconsin at Madison, taking up a complete business course.

He desires to thank the News-Bulletin editor and staff for sending him the paper which he received all the time and which was a welcome visitor. He also wants to thank the Auxiliary to the VFW for their part in sending the paper and the Women's Service Club of Mokena for the many kind deeds extended to him while in service.

He did not receive any mail whatsoever after September, 1945, although mail and the paper was sent to him regularly.

Canning Sugar Stamp Available Now

Housewives will obtain sugar for home canning this year through use of their family ration books, the Office of Price Administration announced. Spare Stamp 9 becomes valid, Monday March 11 for five pounds of home canning sugar. The stamp will be good thru October 31.

Most consumers will find Spare Stamp 9 in their Ration book Four. Others, who have received their ration books only recently, including many returned service men, will find the stamp in the single sheet sugar ration book issued to them in lieu of Ration book four.

Consumers are advised to retain ration books in their possession even though they may have used the last stamp specifically labeled "sugar."

Since there are a number of uncertainties in the sugar supply outlook, particularly as to the amount of the Cuban crop which will be available and in relation to the requirements of war stricken areas—it appears unlikely that the home canning allowance will be more than 10 pounds per person.

Spare Stamp 9 is the first of two stamps to be made good for buying home canning sugar. It is made good now to provide sugar in the southern areas where fruits are available early in the year. Since the stamp will be good thru October 31, housewives in other parts of the country can plan their use of the sugar to coincide with the arrival of fruits in good quantity in their neighborhoods. It is expected that a second stamp can be validated in late June or early July and, like the first stamp, have a validity period long enough to permit its use when fruits become plentiful in each area.

No addition to the regular consumer ration (five pounds each four month period) can be foreseen at this time. Housewives are urged, therefore, to continue to budget their sugar use so that the home canning sugar will be used only as intended, that is, for actual home canning. The next regular sugar stamp becomes good May 1.

The OPA has explained that the new method of issuing home canning sugar, formerly granted upon application to local price and rationing boards, now reduced in number nationally to 885 from the wartime peak of approximately 5,600, has been adopted because local price control boards have not been handling rationing functions since January 1, when administration of the only remaining rationing program, sugar, was brought under OPA district offices. Because district offices would be unable to handle the approximately 35,000,000 individual home canning applications, a method of general issuance is provided. Thus, there will be no delay in getting sugar to home canners, as there would be if consumers were required to wait upon individual approval of applications.

Consideration was given to making the home canning stamp good later in the north than the south because of the later canning season in northern areas. However, regardless of where the line was drawn, many wholesalers, banks handling sugar ration stamps, and the OPA Verification centers, which check stamps for counterfeits would be receiving stamps from both sections. Therefore, such a plan would make the delay in validation of a stamp in the north ineffective, particularly immediately north of the area where the stamp was made good, and would be confusing to the distributing trade and consumers. It would also handicap those people in the north who desire to do early canning with fruits shipped in from the south.

For these reasons it was decided to validate the stamp throughout the country on the same date.

THE OLD JUDGE SAYS...

TED: "Clem and I were wonderin' what you thought of that new movie about the chronic alcoholic, Judge. Understand you saw it before we did."

OLD JUDGE: "Well...it's true most of us never see a case as extreme as that in real life because they are so few and far between. But it does point out one thing...chronic alcoholics are abnormal people and we've got to change our ideas about how to help them."

CLEM: "In what way, Judge?"

OLD JUDGE: "We've got to realize that excessive drinkers are suffering from more than a craving for alcohol. According to psychiatrists and medical men at one of our great universities, the alcoholic is a sick person. The study of hundreds of cases shows he is suffering from some physical, social or emotional condition...just as in the case of that poor chap in the picture. Fortunately, they represent only a very small percentage of those who drink."

TED: "Is anything being done to really help these folks, Judge?"

OLD JUDGE: "Yes...a great deal in clinics throughout the country. And with the cooperation of the beverage distillers who sincerely want their product used only in moderation."

Off the Runway

Civil Air Patrol, Squadron 613-3
by 2nd Lt. Erlene Conel

Fly to Funlands! Canada! Want to tell true "fish stories", hunt moose, deer, and bear? 727 miles from Chicago is Lake of the Woods, Canada. And planes bring ever closer, more convenient, this fish and game region sportsmen have found to be a veritable paradise. Approximately 90 miles in length, measuring 60 miles in width with 16,000 islands. Lake of the Woods claims to be the largest resort district in Ontario. You can fly to International Falls, Minn. clear customs there, then continue on by seaplane if you wish, landing right on the doorstep of the resort of your choice. For this last leg of your journey, resort owners suggest you use an air pilot or guide who knows his airway around the rough country, intricate with lakes and streams.

Quote from a booklet on how to enter Canada: "Persons flying into Canada by other than regular scheduled airlines should write the Civil Aviation Branch, Department of Transport, Ottawa, for permission to fly aircraft into Canada and for instructions regarding regulations, routes, prohibited areas and other important details."

Get on Your Hi Horse! If you'd prefer doodling it out West in the cowboy and Indian country, up near Cheyenne Wyo. are ranches extending western hospitality to us dudes! Typical is an operating cattle and horse ranch, at 7,965 feet of altitude, with saddle horses and cowboys waiting to ride with you, or show you how to ride thru rolling sagebrush, over mountain trails, at sunrise or under the moonlight. So, hitch up your plane and gallop your horsepower over the skyways for a real vacation! Ranch hands will meet your plane at Cheyenne or Laramie, or at some ranches they suggest you land right on their territory! For further information write in, I'll be an eager-beaver to help do the groundwork for your airwork.

Check Points! The University of Southern California, under Navy sponsorship, is developing a supersonic engine which may be capable of hurrying a plane from Los Angeles to Chicago in one hour, 1,000 to 2,000 MPH! A Portland, Oregon distributing company located in a metropolitan area is reported to have a landing field for autogyros and helicopters on its roof. Announcement by the B.A.B.: Flight Tests have been waived for Private and Commercial Pilot certificates. If you're a civilian employee of the US Ferrying or Transport services (ATC, NATS); a member of the Armed Forces of an ally (RCAF, RAF, etc) or a civilian employee of the transport ferrying services of an ally.

Confusion. I wish the personnel at Municipal would learn what's going on upstairs! Friday, the "boss of the family" wired arrival time from California would be 11:42 AM, Saturday. At Muni to greet the plane, I was told at the information desk there was no flight scheduled for that time—instead the plane would land at 12:05. Actual time of arrival, exactly 11:42 AM. Suggestion: How about trying to match the perfection of flight, in all Airline Departments!

Air Cops? A friend reported that on the North side of Chicago, he spotted a "yellow Peril" Navy biplane with civilian markings. It flew about 50' over Lake Michigan, buzzed buildings about 100' off its wingtip. Then climbed to 1,000 feet and executed a beautiful roll. Then, just like a policeman chasing a car to a curb, up flew a Fairchild, which seemed to pursue the misbehaving plane, herding it toward the airports.

Free! Student Pilots can simplify their preparation for Private Licenses by writing to the CAA Office of Aviation Information, Washington, D. C. for a new compact and complete booklet entitled, "Student Pilot Guide."

That's all for now.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES
The subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, March 10, was:

"MAN"

The Golden Text was:
"The steps of a good man are ordered by the Lord; and he delighteth in his way" (Psalms 37:23).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible:

"And God said, Let us make man in our image, after our likeness; and let them have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over the cattle, and over all the earth, and over every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth. So God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him; male and female created he them" (Gen. 1: 26, 27).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy:

"Man is not matter; he is not made up of brain, blood, bones, and other material elements. The Scriptures inform us that man is made in the image and likeness of God. Matter is not that likeness. The likeness of Spirit cannot be so unlike Spirit. Man is spiritual and perfect; and because he is spiritual and perfect, he must be so understood in Christian Science" (p. 475).

Following the ceremony a wedding dinner was served, given by Blanche's grandfather. She continued to her station with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Boyd Carr, Jimmie and Marlin who are enjoying a 30 day vacation in the west.

MORGAN, CPL. RUSSELL J.—
In loving memory of our dear husband and father who gave his life for his country one year ago, March 17, 1945.

A precious one from us has gone,
A voice we loved is stilled,
A place is vacant in our home,
Which never can be filled.

God in His wisdom has recalled,
The boon his love had given,
And though the body slumbers here,
The soul is safe in Heaven.

Grain Bins Are Turned Into Houses at Shenandoah, Iowa

SHENANDOAH, IOWA.—"Housing Problem Is Solved," proudly announced the Shenandoah Sentinel recently, when the chamber of commerce purchased 97 grain bins, and worked out combinations so that two of the bins could be combined to make a dwelling unit.

"Scattered through the state are hundreds of these bins," the Sentinel stated. "They were built by the department of agriculture to store excess grain. For some time they have been empty and available to purchasers. They are all made of good prewar lumber, and were built in three sizes—12 by 16 feet, 14 by 20 feet, and 14 by 24 feet. They already have a good pitched roof on them."

The Shenandoah chamber of commerce raised money enough to buy 97 of the bins and set to work. Windows were put in and plumbing was installed. With a coat of paint and well insulated, the completed house sells between $2,300 and $2,500—and that includes a heating plant!

In several other Iowa communities the building of homes by using old grain bins is progressing rapidly. Frank Lawson, a contractor at Storm Lake, bought 150 of the bins and is converting them into houses.

By the time spring arrives, hundreds of new dwelling units will be scattered over all of Iowa where the housing shortage has been acute. It looks like the Shenandoah Sentinel is right: "The Housing Problem Is Solved."

Bromfield Stuck with Phone Company Which He Just Doesn't Want

MANSFIELD, OHIO.—Author-Farmer Louis Bromfield, famed for his long-distance conversations, ruefully admits that ownership of a rural telephone system is something he doesn't like.

In colorful and somewhat pungent speech, Mr. Bromfield explains that when the rural telephone company was he loaned $1,000 to keep the line to his model Malabar farm open. But the owner, after nine months of trying to keep the outmoded equipment functioning, got tired of it and mailed the author a bill of sale in payment of the loan.

"All I want is a telephone, not a telephone company," Mr. Bromfield declared. "I don't want the Lucas Telephone company with 142 subscribers and 28 miles of line."

So definite is Bromfield in this belief that he has instructed his counsel to petition the Richland county common pleas court to name a receiver and sell the company to a competent operator, not an author.

Idaho Ranchers Feed Deer When Snows Are Deep

IDAHO CITY, IDAHO.—Mr. and Mrs. William Hirt, who live on Middle Fork, proved to be friends of deer and elk this winter when the deep snow made food scarce for animals.

The deer and elk come in herds to the Hirt place where they bed down like cattle during the night. They seem to know they are protected, for they eat in the Hirts' back yard.

"They merely stand and watch any activity about the place," Mrs. Hirt declares.

Many deer were driven up the river to partake of the Hirt hospitality when eagles and coyotes attacked them.

Teachers Will Be Lectured Before Trip to Mexico

AUSTIN, TEXAS.—United States school teachers, who expect to take the Mexican tour sponsored by the National Education association next summer, will have to listen to two days of lectures first.

Dr. Carlos E. Castaneda, an authority on Mexican history, will lecture on the historical background of Mexico and discuss interesting places on the itinerary.

Sociological and cultural information will be given the teachers by Dr. Rex Hopper, assistant professor of sociology at the university.

Austin will be the meeting point for teachers of the South and West making the 27-day tour to Mexico City. A similar pre-travel session will be held in St. Louis for teachers from the North and East who will make the tour.

Sit, Look Pretty In 1946 Dresses

NEW YORK.—Clothes for American women this year will be designed to "sit and look pretty in," according to Designer Omar Kiam. He predicted an era of romantic femininity in dress, of accent on feminine curves, and of startlingly revealing styles. Evening gowns, sheer dresses, lavish and dramatic negligees and play suits will show the new trend. Golf dresses will be cut in nightshirt style, with slit sides in the skirt, cinched by a belt.

GOVERNMENT 'RAT' MEN WORRY OVER—RATS!

WASHINGTON.—Government "rat" men are increasingly worried over rats—and how much they eat. One rat eats 120 pounds of food in a year—preferably grain. Multiply this by the rat population of the U. S. A. and you get some idea of what rats cost to keep. They have caused more destruction than all the wars in history! The wheat they eat never goes into bread, even the darkest kind.

SPORT has an odd way of hooking up time and space. On one night lately we ran across an Australian sportsman in New York, who felt fairly confident that Jack Bromwich and Dinny Pails could take pretty good care of the Davis cup next December. Next we had lunch with Beals Wright, the famous U. S. tennis star. Wright defeated both Norman Brookes and Tony Wilding on Australian turf in Davis cup play back in 1908, when they were considered unbeatable, although Australia retained the cup 3-2.

Grantland Rice

Here was a gap of 38 years in time and 12,000 miles in space with the Davis cup the main item of conversation.

"I think we have an excellent chance to hold the cup," our Australian friend said. "Bromwich is good but in my opinion 19-year-old Dinny Pails is even better. Or he will be better with the 9 or 10 months of play and training he has left before next December. Some good advice from Sir Norman Brookes won't hurt. Bromwich is still in good form, an excellent player and a stout competitor. And we may have others by the cup date."

"Against this strong Australian pair the U. S. must bank largely on Frank Parker, Billy Talbot and possibly Kramer and Schroeder if they can get out of service in time to reach former form. You will discover no Big Bill or Little Bill in this group—the pair who brought the cup home in 1920 after World War I. But it will be an experienced team that can at least put up a good front."

Beals Wright—and 1908

"Australia and 1908 are a long way and a long time back," Beals Wright remarked. "We took a foolish gamble because only Fred Alexander and myself made the trip. I kept wondering what would happen if either of us should get sick or injured. We had no substitute. I had two great matches with Norman Brookes and Tony Wilding and was lucky to be at my best in both contests."

"Unless conditions have changed the U. S. team must be ready to face two important factors. One is the intense heat in December. When we played the temperature was 115 degrees. While it was a dry heat, still 115 is what you might call a bit warm. I recall an intense desire to take a drink of water through the matches, which, of course, I couldn't do. You shouldn't drink any water or anything else while the play is on."

"The second factor is the turf. Australian turf is quite different from ours and England's, where the grass has a much lighter or thinner texture. Australian turf is much stronger, much more rugged. This means your spikes are likely to stick, affecting your ankles and your leg muscles. I don't think my legs were ever quite as sore. I had to go in for rubber-soled shoes."

Beals Wright is the son of the late George Wright, who played shortstop on the unbeaten Reds of 1899, a team that won 55 games, lost none and was tied once.

George Wright played professional ball until he retired in 1876, the year that gave birth to the National league. He was also a brilliant cricketer and a good golfer late in life.

Calls Tilden Greatest

I asked Beals to name the greatest tennis player he had ever seen in his 40-odd years of competition and observation.

"I've seen many great ones," he said "The Doherty brothers—Brookes and Wilding—Larned—McLoughlin—Billy Johnston—the French stars, especially Cochet—the best that have come along since 1900. But the top man is still Bill Tilden in my opinion. Tilden had both speed and power on the court. As far as I could see he had no weakness in his championship years. He had amazing stamina. In addition to this Tilden had unusual court generalship. He was one of the few men I've seen in sport who could let down and then pull himself back. He had the art of keeping his opponent off balance, both mentally and physically. No one ever knew what was coming next."

Honesty Pays Off

Several years ago Hurry-Up Yost, Michigan's famous football coach, made over 200 addresses in one season to high school and university gatherings.

The theme of his many talks was this—"Honesty is the best investment."

"I wanted to prove," he told me, "that honesty was not only the best policy—but that it also paid bigger dividends in every way. In other words—that you could make more money being honest."

Postwar Millionaires

So tremendous was the industrial development in this country for two decades after the Civil war that it produced several hundred millionaires, says Collier's.

Between 1890 and 1910, more than 500 daughters of such millionaires were married to titled Europeans. As the majority of the husbands were poor, the ultimate cost of these international unions to the families of the girls has been estimated at 220 million dollars.

Connected, Triple-Braced Traction Bars... Give Firestone
GROUND GRIPS
A "CENTER BITE"

TESTS conducted under a wide range of soil and weather conditions proved conclusively that Firestone Ground Grip tires will give your tractors up to 16% more pull on the drawbar. That's because only connected, triple-braced traction bars... with their extra tread-bar length in the center of the pulling zone... take a "Center Bite."

Besides giving Firestone Ground Grips a "Center Bite," connected traction bars also insure better cleaning. There are no broken-bar, trash-catching pockets such as you see on ordinary tires. The connected bars are stronger, too, because they are triple-braced. This added strength increases tread life.

These money- and time-saving features are responsible for today's farm preference for Firestone Ground Grips. And they are the reasons why it will pay you to have Firestone Ground Grips on your present tractors and to specify Ground Grips when you buy a new tractor.

*Area in white shows the "Center Bite" traction zone, not found in other tires because of Firestone's exclusive patent rights.

Household Hints

Cook a piece of salt pork with green string beans for good flavor without the addition of butter.

Use alcohol or ammonia water to clean the glass over pictures. Dry carefully and polish with chamois or crumpled paper.

If the lid of your pressure cooker sticks or if the cooker leaks steam, rub the edges of the lid and kettle with cooking oil before sealing it.

In sewing on pockets, baste top of pocket in place first, then sew around the sides and bottom, to get the pocket straight.

Sun bath is fine for baby, but not for colored cottons. Cotton garments will fade faster in the sun than if dried indoors or in the shade.

Make your shopping list on an envelope. When shopping, place each sale bill in the envelope. Then place envelope in record book to be entered when time permits. File envelopes.

To clean an egg beater quickly, give it a few turns in cold water, then in hot water, and finally a few turns in the air. Keep cogs and wheels out of the water.

Learn to sew with a thimble. It saves time and will prevent your finger from becoming sore. Wear the thimble on the third finger of your right hand and push the needle with the side of it.

LIVESTOCK DISEASE CONTROL MEETING

Northern Illinois farmers are invited to attend a meeting to be held on Monday, March 18 at 1:30 pm. in the Marm Bureau Office, 110½ East Jackson Street, Woodstock, to hear a discussion of the livestock disease control measures that are being administered by the state department of agriculture. Arnold P. Benson, Director of the department announced today.

"The last session of the Illinois legislature made some important changes in the laws affecting livestock disease control," said Director Benson, "and the Department is interested in explaining the new measures that have been adopted to as many Illinois farmers as is possible.

"Among the important changes in the law is a provision that effective on July 1, 1947, all livestock becomes subject to State regulations and the program that will be discussed at the Woodstock meeting is to inform Illinois farmers of the steps that are being taken to prepare herd owners for that date.

"Emphasis during the 16 months that remain before July 1, 1947, will be placed on a calfhood vaccination program and the State Department of Agriculture, through its Livestock Division, will provide the vaccines and the veterinary service to permit the vaccination of all calves between the ages of 4 and 8 months. It is hoped in this method to have an immunized herd population on Illinois farms at the time the new state law becomes effective."
